Landlords, tenants fill courts as eviction moratorium ends

Michael Casey
Philip Marcelo
Associated Press

PROVIDENCE, R.I. — Gabe Imondi, a 74-year-old landlord from Rhode Island, had come to court hoping to get his apartment back. He was tired of waiting for federal rental assistance and wondered aloud “what they’re doing with that money?”

Hours later, Luis Vertentes, in a different case, was told by a judge he had three weeks to clear out of his one-bedroom apartment in nearby East Providence. The 43-year-old landscaper said he was four months behind on rent after being hospitalized for a time.

“I’m going to be homeless, all because of this pandemic,” Vertentes said. “I feel helpless, like I can’t do anything even though I work and I got a full-time job.”

Scenes like this played out from North Carolina to Virginia to Ohio and beyond Monday as the eviction system, which saw a dramatic drop in cases before a federal moratorium expired over the weekend, rumbled back into action. Activists fear millions will be tossed onto the streets as the delta variant of the coronavirus surges.

The Biden administration allowed the federal moratorium to expire over the weekend and Congress was unable to extend it.

But on Tuesday the administration appeared to offer a reprieve for many. The government planned to put in place a new eviction moratorium that would protect areas where 90% of the U.S. population lives, according to three people familiar with the plans, who insisted on anonymity to discuss the forthcoming announcement.

The move followed protests from Democratic lawmakers over the swift end to the moratorium as the delta variant of the coronavirus surges.

Historic amounts of rental assistance allocated by Congress had been expected to avert a crisis. But the distribution has been painfully slow: Only about $3 billion of the first tranche of $25 billion had been distributed through June by states and localities. A second amount of $21.5 billion will go to the states.

More than 15 million people live in households that owe as much as $20 billion to their landlords, according to the Aspen Institute. As of July 5, roughly 3.6 million people in the U.S. said they faced eviction in the next two months, according to the U.S. Census Bureau’s Household Pulse Survey.

In Columbus, Ohio, Chelsea Rivera showed up Monday at a Franklin County court after receiving an eviction notice last month. A single mom, she’s behind $2,988 in rent and late fees for the one-bedroom apartment she rents for herself and three young sons.

The 27-year-old said she started to struggle after her hours were cut in May at the Walmart warehouse where she worked. She’s applied to numerous agencies for help but they’re either out of money, have a waiting list, or not able to help until clients end up in court with an eviction notice.

Rivera said she’s preparing herself mentally to move into a shelter with her children.

“We just need help,” she said, fighting back tears. “It’s just been really hard with everyday issues on top of worrying about where you’re going to live.”

But there was more optimism in Virginia, where Tiara Burton, 23, learned she would be getting federal help and wouldn’t be evicted. She initially feared the worst when the moratorium lifted.

“That was definitely a worry yesterday,” said Burton, who lives in Virginia Beach. “If they’re going to start doing evictions again, then I’m going to be faced with having to figure out where me and my family are going to go. And that’s not something that anyone should have to worry about these days at all.”

She was relieved to learn she was approved for assistance through the Virginia Rent Relief Program. Her court hearing was postponed 30 days, during which time she and her landlord can presumably work things out.

“I’m grateful for that,” she said. “That’s another weight lifted off of my shoulders.”

For some tenants, getting assistance has proven impossible.

After her landlord refused federal assistance to cover $5,000 in back rent, Antoinette Eleby, 42, of Miami, expects an eviction order within two to three weeks. She is sending her five children to live with her mother in another county.

“My main concern is that now that I have an eviction, how will I find another place? Some places will accept you and some will not,” said Eleby, whose entire family got COVID-19 earlier this year.

Around the country, courts, legal advocates and law enforcement agencies had been gearing up for evictions to return to pre-pandemic levels, a time when 3.7 million people were displaced from their homes every year, or seven every minute, according to the Eviction Lab at Princeton University.

Some cities with the most cases, according to the Eviction Lab, are Phoenix with more than 42,000 eviction filings, Houston with more than 37,000, Las Vegas with nearly 27,000 and Tampa more than 15,000. Indiana and Missouri also have more than 80,000 filings.

While the moratorium was enforced in much of the country, there were states like Idaho where judges ignored it, said Ali Rabe, executive director of Jesse Tree, a non-profit that works to prevent evictions in the Boise metropolitan area. “Eviction courts ran as usual,” she said.

That was much the way things played out in parts of North Carolina, where on Monday Sgt. David Ruppe knocked on a weathered mobile home door in Cleveland County, a rural community an hour west of Charlotte.

“We haven’t seen much of a difference at all,” he said.

He waited a few minutes on the porch scattered with folding chairs and toys. Then a woman opened the door.

“How are you?” he asked quietly, then explained her landlord had started the eviction process. The woman told Ruppe she’d paid, and he said she’d need to bring proof to her upcoming Aug. 9 court date.

Ruppe, who has two young sons, said seeing families struggle day-after-day is tough.

“There’s only so much you can do,” he said. “So, if you can offer them a glimmer of hope, words of encouragement, especially if there’s kids involved. Being a father, I can relate to that.”

In the Matter of
Application of Duke Energy Progress, LLC, for Approval of Demand-Side Management and Energy Efficiency Cost Recovery Rider Pursuant to N.C.G.S. § 62-133.9 and Commission Rule R8-69

PUBLIC NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the North Carolina Utilities Commission has scheduled a public hearing in the annual demand-side management (DSM) and energy efficiency (EE) cost recovery proceeding for Duke Energy Progress, LLC (DEP). The public hearing has been scheduled to begin immediately following the hearing in Docket No. E-2, Sub 1272, which is scheduled to begin at 10:00 a.m. on Tuesday, September 21, 2021, in Commission Hearing Room 2115, Dobbs Building, 430 North Salisbury Street, Raleigh, North Carolina. This proceeding is being held pursuant to the provisions of § 62-133.9 and Commission Rule R8-69, for the purpose of determining whether an increment or decrement rider is required to allow DEP to recover all reasonable and prudent costs incurred for adoption and implementation of new DSM and new EE measures and appropriate incentives. Public witness testimony will be received in accordance with Commission Rule R1-21(g).

On June 15, 2021, Duke Energy Progress filed its application for approval of DSM/EE cost recovery pursuant to N.C.G.S. § 62-133.9 and Rule R8-69. By its application DEP requests a total annual revenue increase of approximately $8.1 million, effective January 1, 2022, from the DSM/EE rider currently in effect. This request would result in an increase of 0.067 cents per kilowatt-hour (kWh) for residential customers. Non-residential General Service customers, depending upon their participation in DEP’s DSM or EE programs, would see a DSM rider decrease of 0.010 cents per kWh, and an EE rider decrease of 0.023 cents per kWh. Lighting customers would see an EE rider increase of 0.036 cents per kWh. Industrial and large commercial customers that have, under N.C.G.S. § 62-133.9, opted out of and never participated in DEP’s DSM and EE programs are not subject to the rider.

Pastors pray for county after Sheriff’s passing

Gavin Stone
Matthew Sasser
Daily Journal

ROCKINGHAM — Mourners for Sheriff James Clemmons formed a prayer circle outside of the Courthouse steps at Sunday afternoon to pray for his family, law enforcement and emergency services staff, and the county.

Pastors and ministers across denominations, plus law enforcement personnel and community members, took turns speaking at the event, some sharing memories of the sheriff and others calling on the crowd to be strong in the wake of losing such a towering figure in the community. They gathered around a Sheriff’s Office cruiser adorned with wreaths and flowers from well wishers.

Clemmons passed away at his home on Thursday due to natural causes, according to county officials.

Reverend Thomasine Cox, associate minister at Mount Sinai Missionary Baptist Church, organized the event through her organization, M.E.G. (Mothers Experiencing Grief), of which Clemmons was a big supporter from the outset. She said that the Holy Spirit impressed upon her the need to gather everyone together to pray for the community during this time.

“This was a hard blow — a lot of us knew him on a personal level,” Cox said after the ceremony.

Cox said that Clemmons was instrumental in helping her form M.E.G.

and to pursue nonprofit status. The group was holding monthly group support meetings for parents who have lost a child until the pandemic hit. Long-term, they hope to start scholarship funds for children left without a parent dur to gun violence. They’re planning to resume regular meetings in October.

“Any way that a mother loses a child, we want to embrace them,” Cox said.

Those who led prayers were, Bishop Dr. David Brown, who prayed for Clemmons’ family, Pastor Michael Griffin of East Rockingham United Methodist and Cordova United Methodist, who delivered a message specifically for emergency first responders, and Rev.

Pat Bennett who prayed for the county as a whole.

“I pray right now that you lord would continue to guide and direct them,” Griffin said. “Let them know that there is somebody there for them. Give them strength and compassion they need in the times that they need them.”

Griffin added that people always need help from first responders, and it’s necessary to give thanks for the important work that they do.

Lt. Andy Ansley with the Rockingham Police Department recalled seeing Clemmons, who he had met previously but wasn’t close with at the time, on the scene of an accident just after he was elected to the position. He said that officers were often shocked that the sheriff was showing up to scenes himself.

“I walked up to him, I said ‘Thank you Sheriff,’ and he had a little smile on his face because he was the sheriff now!” Ainsley said. “I enjoyed working with him. He was a great man and I’ll miss him.”

Hamlet Police Chief Dennis Brown said that while he has only known Clemmons for a brief time, he saw what made .

“He’s what’s right in law enforcement, he’s what’s right for police officers, he set an excellent example for others to follow,” Brown said. “He’s going to be missed.”

After the prayers, Cox gave the floor to the only uniformed Sheriff’s Office representative in attendance, Sgt. McDole who was standing guard by the door to the Courthouse. McDole declined to speak but thanked everyone for their support.

A celebration of life for Clemmons will be held at 11 a.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 10 at the Cole Auditorium located at 1041 West Hamlet Ave. in Hamlet. In lieu of flowers, the family is asking that memorials be made to the J.E. Clemmons Grandchildren Trust Fund, address: 105 North Long Dr. in Rockingham, 28379.

Clemmons

“Richmond County, do you know what you had?” Peterkin asked the audience repeatedly. He joked that someone “had the nerve” to assign Peterkin to be Clemmons’s mentor when he took over as sheriff, and Clemmons, the first African-American elected as Richmond County Sheriff, soon went on to lead the other 99 sheriffs in North Carolina as president of the North Carolina Sheriff’s Association.

Detailing their last conversation, Peterkin said that even though Clemmons had told him he was “tired” and planned to retire last year, he said that night that he had changed his mind and wanted to run again. According to Peterkin, Clemmons stayed on as sheriff last year because he saw the outpouring of condemnation of law enforcement around the country, and wanted to secure a raise for his staff in this year’s budget to help address the issues with recruitment affecting all law enforcement agencies, which he did.

James Clemmons, III, the sheriff’s son, offered encouragement to the RSCO staff, many of whom he has grown close to over the years as their boss’s son. He recited a poem,

“He’s not my dad, he’s not,” Clemmons III said of Gullede. “Do it your way, not my dad’s way” — looking at Gullede in the audience — “Do it your way.”

Gullede, during his time to speak, talked about how he got to know Clemmons when Gullede was a road deputy in 1999.

“As he led our county he instilled in us: always put God first, family second, your job third and everything else after,” Gullede said. “He always encouraged the men and women of the Sheriff’s Office to approach people with respect ... While serving as a great mentor to myself and others, he would often share with us that we were all one office, not a sheriff’s office not a jail not a courthouse, and we were to treat each other like long-lost brothers.”

Clemmons was first hired as a patrol deputy for the Sheriff’s Office in 1989, and was then promoted from Lieutenant, to Captain, and then as Major before being elected as Sheriff in 2011. Clemmons served as president of the North Carolina Sheriffs’ Association from ‘18-‘19, chaired the Executive Committee from ‘19-‘20, and was a vice president of the association from ‘14-‘18.

The proposed JAAR per kilowatt for demand rate class customers is $1.51 for Medium General Service and $1.57 for Large General Service. The JAAR for all customer classes would be effective for service rendered on and after December 1, 2021, through November 30, 2022.
