Just a "good job" message to the NCUC. I continue to be impressed by the way you hold Duke Energy's feet to the fire over the years. While their public spokesperson always talks a good story, they are only out to make as much money as possible (as they should?). We North Carolinians (and all Duke Energy consumers) lose the power of the purse and feet with Duke being a utility. You ladies and gentlemen are our only avenue of influence on their business plans other than public opinion (which seems to be well below profit on their priority list, contrary to what their spokesperson would tell us). But you already know that.

The coal ash pits should be removed, not covered. And the expense should be paid for with profits, not rate increases, since it was their engineering decision to choose that method for coal ash storage/"disposal"(?). But I think you've lost control there because it's gone over to legal.

Push harder on renewables. What's their excuse? Cost? Ha! WE are paying for it, yes? Would I pay more for my energy if it was for a higher % renewables and less fossil fuels? Heck yes! (Hmmm, global warming? We are WAY behind.). Thankfully Mr. Harry Brown has stopped trying to speak for the military in banning wind farms that won't bother them (sheesh!).

If this is not the forum for a post like this, if you would, please forward appropriately? I tried posting to the "contact us" section of the NCUC web site but the form required a docket number. Thanks.
